

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A process in which a signaling unit contains at least two line units which are used when setting up a connection for the transmission of user data in data packets wherein the line units in each case terminate the signaling with respect to one of the 5 terminal devices involved in the data transmission and exchange internal signaling messages with one another to allow the signaling to be carried out in a simple manner.